Stuff that happens on servers

back-end development

How the server works

It's just software. What's it doing?

- It listens for connections on some predetermined port

- When it receives and accepts a connection, it talks HTTP

  - Which means, it waits for the client to send an HTTP request

  - and then it sends back the appropriate HTTP response